Madisan Count the office needs only a request from Madisan Count yis the's Attorney Dick Allen. The office will then determine if the matter merits attention. If so, the opinions rendered by that office are thoroughly researched by legal experts.

The cost to local taxpayers and Partney would likely be significantly reduced through this means. Though the Illinois Attorney General's opinion does not carry the weight of law, in the interest of saving public money while attaining an expert opinion, we ask that the board talk to Allen and pursue the option of going to the Illinois Attorney General's Office with its concerns.

That option seems more financially reasonable than running to court at taxpayers' expense.

There is one final bit of 'gamesmanship' which didn't under the field.
During Game Six of last year's World Series, the Cardinals' Todd Worrell was about to pitch to Kansas City's Jorge Orta to begin the ninth inning. The Cardinals led the game 1-0 and were only three outs away from the championship.
It seems that when Herzog with the White Sox and always seemed to be getting clutch hits against Kansas City. Whitey tried everything he could to stop Orta, but nothing worked.
Now he tried to get tricky. As Orta was about to swing, Whitey took off his cap. Since he still had his crew cut then, the reflection off the top of his head from the stadium lights created a blinding effect. It worked the stadium lights created a blinding effect. It worked the stadium lights and was able only to dribble a slow ground ball to the right side of the infield. Jack Clark fielded the ball and tossed to Worrell covering the bag.

But then Whitey blew it. As he turned to watch the play, he forgot to put his cap back on. Just as the inglit reflected off his head and into the eyes of umpire Don Denkinger, temporarily blinding him. And then... Sometimes it just doesn't pay to be too tricky.

Answers for senior citizens' concerns

Your questions this week are di-verse — ranging from retiring in foreign countries to discounts for senfor citizens, from alrime flight programs to self-operated business-es. Here we go with what you want to know.

Can you supply, any information, pro and con, on inoving to Central Amnerica for retirement—such as Guatemala, Mexico and Costa Rica? I am interested in the cost of living, stability of governments and where to write for information.—JEC., Ridgeley, W. Va. A! I could almost give the answer as, No, don't do it." But you have asked for details. Central American countries generally are politically unstable at this lime, and with etconomic conditions, that could, cause serious disruption in the future. The U.S. State Department is your best source. Write directly or ask your congressional representative to forward Historically, Mexico and the Central American countries have had a very low cost of living that has al-

Mistorically, Mexico and the Central American countries have had a very low cost of living that has allowed U.S. retirees, even on limited funds, to live very well. Devaluations in many countries, combined with continuing inflation, have straighed the local citizenry in many Central American countries.

You can receive Social Security checks while living in a foreign country, but Medichre will not cover, your medical costs outside the United States.

At one time we recommended the consideration of Mexico and Central America for retirement—but we have serious questions today, if you do want to consider these countries, get to the library to study the culture, the form of gov-

Q. When husinesses have discounts for seniors at age 55, does that mean you must be a retiree and 85 or older to qualify? — R.M., Philadelphila, Pa. A. Fir the senior discounts you need only meet the age requirement, you need for the arctire. So, count your years and take your discounts as you can capture them.

Q. I want to get senior citizen discounts but I am not yet age 68. So, I am rejected many times when I task for the discount. How can I qualify?—R.L. Los Angeles
A. Senior citizen discounts are created by businesses to recognize mature ladults at certain ages. If you happen to be that age you should get the discount by showing some form of identification. If, you don't qualify by age you should not might be very expensive, while living in other areas might be both remote and expensive for traveling hack home periodically.

Moving to a foreign country is a major, serious step. For some retirees it can be the ideal lifestyle, for others it can be a costly, ill-advised mistake. Take the time to study alternatives, other parts of the world, other parts

Q. You mentioned in an earlier accolumn near-unlimited trayel for a year on certain airlines for a one-time price each year. Where do I get more information? — E.H. Los Angeles

Emil and Helen Dandar, now 68 Emil and Helen Dandar, now 68 and 62 respectively, live in Laughdrne Gables, Pa. Both worked as professionals before retirement — Emil as a school psychologist and counselor and Helen as a medical assistant. Nine years as a medical assistant. Nine years ago before they retired, the Dan-dars launched second careers as a team. What was an avocation dur-ing working years has become a unique and record-setting collabo-ration today.

unique and record-setting comparation today.
Emil and Helen Dandar took their mutual interests in garden-ing and cooking as the foundation for their new career. They have created thousands of recipes and have authored and published three cookbooks — not "just" cookbooks, mind you, but cookbooks that use a single, common ingredient. And that is where the record setting comes in.

Why pumpkin?" we asked Ernil Dandar.

Because we grew pumpkins every year like a lot of other people, but found the recipes for preparing it. Our earlier books used the same ingredient concept, with 207 recipies for zucchini, 100 for yogurt and 87 for peanut butter. The Dandar books have been reviewed favorably by hational publishing and culinary organizations and publications, including the prestigious American Library Association. The publisher is Sterling Cookbooks of Pennsylvania, and unless you happen to be shopping in that state, you'd best order by mail if you're interested in these unique gookbooks.

Golden years for travelers exciting

It's no news to lots of people that the older you get, the more travel opportunities come your way. And as I am rapidly becoming slighle for senior discounts. I get more interested in the many notes relating to bargain discounts. I get more interested in the many notes relating to bargain seems as though everyone in the travel industry — hotels, restaurants, travel agents and tour operators — are doing everything they can to attract more mature travelers. They claim that folk seem to pick up the three keys to successful touring curiosity, common sense and patience as as they mature, better the people, "Robget Dunn, vice president of the fravel division of the 16-million-member American Association Of Retired Persons, told Newbouse News reporter Joel Sleed in a recent interview.

The service of the service

Dunn, who is 62 and a batchelor, has spent more! than 25 years tracking the ways of the mature traveler. He divides his time-fequally between checking out lour operations and facilities here and abroad and lecturing to older and abroad and lecturing to older and abroad and lecturing to older and cunities. In the course of a year, he travels about 10,000 miles and lectures to about as many people. In the interview with Sleed the travel executive offered the following advice for travelers of all ages — some of which can be taken somewhat lightly with a grain of salt:

— Hy our traveling with a spouse or companion, sit down and find out what and do. Make a list, I you want to shop during that free hour and your frend prefers museums, agree to go your separate ways before you ever start out — otherwise, you'll spend the hour anguing, with no one happy at the result.

— Figure out what your budget should be and then see how much a trip to your selected destination will cost.

Vou orobably ought to add an overage for "just in case."

• Get brochures from at least six four companies. Be sure to read the small print so you'll know exactly what you're getting for your money. The front page may have one price, but the add-ons listed in the small print, such as tipping, transfers; etc., could push the price way up. Be sure to find out everything that's included in the price.

Check the number of meals included in any package and make arrangements for others.

If the brochure states that yould see the Louvre, your tour bus might just be driving by it. Toe correct language should be that the group will visit the Louvre.

• Take a list from each brochure and add up the total cost. Then go to a travel agent and ask him about the pickage. If there are some things he can't answer, call the tour operator directly.

Just about every one of them has a toll-free number. This also applies to the actual number of days included in the package—a 10-day trip may start late the afternoon of Day 1 and end early of the morning of day 10—cruises are notorious for this.
